

Our values

We are committed to promoting, developing and coordinating the transplantation of organs, tissues and cells nationwide, and to promoting awareness among the public and medical professionals. Transparency, responsibility and respect are the values that drive us towards achieving these goals, and form the foundation upon which the many tasks and projects carried out by our non-profit organization are based. They underpin our integrity as the Swiss National Foundation for Organ Donation and Transplantation and ensure that our partners and employees, medical professionals, those affected by organ donation and the general public can place their trust in us.

Transparency

Our work in relation to all issues concerning organ donation and transplantation can be a sensitive issue for the general public. We are therefore committed to providing clear, precise and transparent information about what we do. In addition, our commitment to transparency means that we work on raising awareness of, and answer questions about, complex issues. We guarantee transparency in relation to what we do, the way we work and the rules that apply in various fields. Internally, we communicate in a fair, open and honest manner. Openness, transparency, cooperation and loyalty among employees ensure an excellent team spirit.

Responsibility

We act with responsibility when dealing with partners, employees and the general public. Our work is driven by our passion, our desire to innovate and our will to play an active role. We aim to provide the very highest quality in everything that we do and work in a highly professional manner, and are aware that our role means we have a huge responsibility and a duty to act in the best interests of both donors and recipients of organs and tissue. The allocation of organs to recipients and maintenance of the national waiting list are carried out in accordance with clearly defined laws.

Respect

We strive to offer constructive solutions and maintain a competent, respectable and professional image, treat people with respect and create an environment that promotes fairness and recognition among employees and partners. Respect is also our number one priority when providing information to the general public and dealing with those affected by organ donation. Our appreciation for our partners, employees and those affected by organ donation help maintain our integrity and successful partnerships.
